Hello!

Welcome to all new MBP BizMajic subscribers.

The first long weekend of the season is here! The kids are excited and many families are getting ready to head out of town and enjoy it! What are your plans for the long weekend? A bit of camping? Boating? Or that all famous spring cleaning and yard work? What ever you are going to be doing, have fun and play safe!

We will be off getting our own cabin cruiser ready to put in the water. Nothing like cruising on the lake with the fishing lines out, no phones and no TVs <grin> Peace and quiet.

Find something for this weekend that you love to do and de-stress! You will come back Tuesday to work a better person for it. Refreshed and most likely a new regenerated attitude. Some even come up with their best ideas while out enjoying the freedom that working at home provides us!

If so there are very important things that you will need to take into consideration and questions that you will have to honestly answer to yourself before you take that ultimate step into being your own boss, the world of the entrepreneur.

This is a step a commitment that needs to be made with both eyes wide open and only after you have openly and honestly answered the important questions.

The Important Questions

Do you thrive on the hustle and bustle of others around you and the interaction that takes place at the office, the exchange of conversation as one passes co-workers in the hall or wherever you may work?

If your answer is yes, then starting/owning a home based business is a decision that you may wish to reconsider.

But if instead you believe that you would be quite satisfied sitting alone in your own office at home only speaking with clients, minding your own business ;- ) you may just have what it takes to be a successful home business entrepreneur.

If you are content not having the latest gossip from coworkers schooling around you, then you, too, would revel in the freedom to live the lifestyle that you and your family want and deserve which is offered by being a home business entrepreneur.

Do you spend every waking hour dreaming of being your own boss, as your boss is letting people know that they need to give up their weekend plans for the good of the company. The desire, to work for a boss that truly cares, about you and your family's future.

What It Takes For Home Business Success

Desire, Confidence, Heart all rapped up to make Self-motivation which is the key to succeeding when starting your home based business. You will need the ability to drive yourself (Desire), determination to push forward to every new sale/client (Confidence) and the willing to invest the time and effort into your new home business (Heart).

The level of success of your new home business will depend solely on the effort and time you are willing to invest in your new business. All the abilities you pose will be put to practice, from organization, planning marketing to time management as you immerse yourself into the exciting world of the home business entrepreneur.

Do You Believe?

Are you able to push and motivate yourself? Do you have the tenacity, drive to work independently? Are you willing to invest the time to allow your business to grow from an infant to glorious maturity? As the boss you are now responsible for the disappointments, but also remember you are responsible for the victories!

Know that you are your own boss you are empowered, you have the ability to achieve beyond old expectations, there is no longer a ceiling over you that determines the levels you can reach. Your past no longer has to dictate your future. Gone are the days when time was not yours to control, when you had to answer to a demanding boss that showed no appreciation for the sacrifices that you made day in and day out.

Know going that extra mile means success for you and your family. Your home based business now affords you the time to take care of your family with quality of quantity time while still making money. You have the best of both worlds. You now have true job security. You are the boss aren't you?

Believe!!

Your most important job will be to Believe in you, even when things are moving slower than you may have anticipated it would be. And remember the analogy of crabs in a crab pot "when one tries to climb out the rest pull him back in" So stop listening to those negative and derogatory comments made by those who are too afraid to succeed, stuck in their dead end jobs. They will always try pulling you back down. I Believe you can, just as I Believed I could.

A small, but powerful, group of Internet insiders have been quietly raking in a king's ransom with a system so simple you'll be outraged that you hadn't heard of it until now. No prospecting, no phone calls, no passing up sales.

JOKE OF THE WEEK
--*-- --*-- --*-- --*-- --*-- --*-- --*--

( I )

The priest was a fisherman, but he hadn't fished in months. One perfect Sunday morning he couldn't resist. He called up the Bishop and claimed he had laryngitis. The priest then headed out to his favorite spot.

The hook hadn't been in the water five minutes before he got a strike, and landed the biggest fish he had ever caught - although he had seen bigger ones., A half hour* later, he caught the biggest fish he had ever seen. Another forty-five minutes later he landed a fish that broke the world record.

All this time St. Peter and God have been watching the priest from heaven. St. Peter turned to God, and said, "How can you reward this priest? He lied. He let down his congregation."

God smiles at St. Peter, and replies, "I'm punishing him."

St. Peter is confused, so God continues, "Well, after he finishes, who can he tell his story to?"

Q:

I know you've mentioned before certain things that Web sites can see when we're online, but they were always mixed in with other information. Can you give us a basic list of them instead?

A:

I sure can! It's very important to know what Web sites can see when you're visiting them, so I'm not going to waste any more time. Let's get right into it!

If you use your computer everyday (which I'm guessing you do if you're reading this newsletter), you probably visit several Web sites each time you get online, right? I know I do. I'm constantly going from site to site, just checking different things out, reading articles, etc. Now, when you're on those Web sites, have you ever wondered what kind of information you're revealing to them? If that question has you intrigued, keep reading!

I know we here at WorldStart have mentioned certain things to you before about this topic, but I thought it would be nice to give you a basic rundown of what all Web sites can obtain about you when you're logged in. To begin with, they can see your IP address (192.186.1.1, for example), which is what allows computers to connect with each other on the Internet.

A Web site cannot see your identity through the IP address, but it can verify your ISP and the region or city you live in. Kinda creepy, huh?! Now, there are programs you can use to keep your IP information private. They do not make you completely anonymous, but they help. A couple you may want to check into are Ghostsurf and Privoxy.

Another thing Web sites can pick up on is your cookies. Cookies are files that help sites save certain information in between your visits. For example, if you have a username and password for a certain site, the cookies remember that information for you so you don't always have to log back in. They help make things faster, but they can be a little risky too. They basically allow a Web site to see the path you follow while you're logged in. You are able to see your cookies though and even delete them if you want to. To do so in Internet Explorer, go to Tools, Internet Options and click on the Settings button. From there, click the View Files button and you'll be able to see the cookies. If you want to delete them, just click the Delete Cookies button in the first window. In Firefox, go to Tools, Options and select the Privacy icon. Click the Show Cookies button. If you want to delete them, hit the Remove Cookies button and you'll be all set.

Continuing on, Web sites are also able to see your network ports. These ports are basically paths of communication for your computer and they're all numbered. For example, Web sites usually use port number 80. These ports can help Web sites to obtain what programs you're using while on the Internet. While that doesn't seem so bad, they do tend to create some security holes in the actual program. To keep this from happening, make sure you have a good firewall on your computer. A firewall is able to close down any of the ports you don't need.

There's one more! Web sites are able to determine which Web browser and what version of Windows you're using. That information helps Web site owners update and improve their pages, but on the other hand, malicious sites can use that same information to attack you. To avoid any problems like that, make sure your computer is always updated and be sure to run your antivirus, spyware, etc. scans regularly.

Now, I know this information probably isn't what you wanted to hear, but once you know what's going on each time you visit a Web site, you can help yourself to stay safe. I'm definitely not telling you to stop surfing the Web. It's too much fun to do that! But I am telling you all this so you can work to keep yourself and your computer as safe as possible. Yes, the Internet can be a dangerous place, but if you do the right things to combat all the problems, you'll be good to go!

Until next week, stay safe out there

The SaveNetRadio Coalition
The future of Internet radio is in immediate danger.
Royalty rates for webcasters have been drastically increased by a recent ruling and are due to go into effect on July 15 (retroactive to Jan 1, 2006!). If the increased rates remain unchanged, the majority of webcasters will go bankrupt and silent on this date.
